For this purpose, published research has to be disseminated properly. Most journals do disseminate their published articles in many ways, but authors can boost dissemination of their research. Often, well-disseminated research leads to higher citations. Speak up in meetings. Strengthen your relationship with your boss. Ask for high-visibility projects. Volunteer to represent your team. Participate in learning opportunities. Demonstrate your expertise. Form a Mastermind Group. Grow your network.

Totally 52 members participated in this seminar. Professor Carol Dweck's research has shown that how we think of ourselves profoundly affects the way we lead our lives. Our mindset is the view we have of our qualities and characteristics, and whether they can be changed. If you have a fixed mindset, you believe that characteristics such as intelligence, personality, and creativity are set: "This is just how I am – there's nothing I can do about it." A growth mindset, however, is based on the belief that these qualities can be developed through effort and perseverance A research mindset focuses not only on learning to answer questions, but also seeking to only answer questions pertinent to the moment. The growth mindset is the belief that your talents can be developed through learning and effort. The fixed mindset, in contrast, is the belief that success stems from being naturally gifted.

He explained that the project should be practical, not too costly, and have the potential for being repeated in other situations. A project proposal emphasizes the impact the activity will have. Evaluation is more on the field, usually more important in project proposals. The title is important. It should reflect the focus of your project. The most important words should come first. Companies understand the promise of Industry 4.0: faster, smarter, more sustainable productivity. What’s hard is making that promise come true. Management thinker and 'father of Industry 4.0' Henrik von Scheel describes three key drivers for Industry 4.0 success: think value, not tech; think people, not tools; and set clear targets from the start. Totally 55 members participated in this seminar. Finally, he said that getting the funding for any project will be an added advantage for the college, department and even for the faculties and students.

He explained the benefits of the digital copy rights laws that They are relevant because it takes a lot of talent, energy and resources to come up with creative, new ideas or products, and it is only natural that creators benefit financially from their efforts. For example, a software company has to spend years and crores of rupees to come up with a commercially viable product. It stands to lose money if someone cheaply reproduces the product and sells it for a fraction of the price, in what is called ‘piracy’. Pirated software not only brings losses to the developing company but it also acts as a disincentive to others who may come up with new innovative products.
